- Entrance An Unprecedented Opportunity The work on the entrance to King Tut's tomb at Thebes in Luxor continues. The fifth diorama has now been erected and will be placed in the Tribeca Grand Hotel. Join the discovery and find out a little more about how the crew is trying to extract the four remaining paintings from inside the tomb. Discover™ Egypt: The Tomb of Tutankhamun Regard The Tomb of Tutankhamun, an excavation special of Discover™ Egypt, on the left, Best of September, 2011 Ancient Treasures: The Treasure of Tutankhamun Exclusive at Camera. Yale Center for Near Eastern Art and archaeology 2008. In 1907, in Egypt, Howard Carter found the tomb of a Pharaoh who had died at the age of eighteen. No one would ever discover the reason for this sudden and premature death. Nearly two hundred years later it was discovered that this Pharaoh was Tutankhamun, the first of the 'lost kings' of ancient Egypt. In December 1922, Howard Carter discovered that there were chambers to the east of the tomb filled with great treasures, which had been hidden by his predecessor. Naturally it was an amazing discovery for a European. Over the following decades, four other graves were discovered. However, in 1926, almost sixty years after this first discovery of a partially destroyed tomb, the Egyptian Antiquities Museum failed to unearth all the treasures and secret chambers. As a consequence, we have today only a single part of the treasure left. In 1999 the resting-place of the young King, who had been buried around 1330 BC, was discovered by an American company. Here at the site were found lots of beautiful colored materials of stone, wood and papyrus as well as most of the furniture of the apartments that belonged to a young Pharaoh. Unfortunately, for those who did not know the preparation steps and processes that had been performed, the treasure was hard to understand and to date it is not yet comprehensible. Archaeologists of the company also talked about the state of the floor-tiles and the pedestals in the interiors of the chambers. During the excavation work, a mere fifth of the underground tomb of Tutankhamun could be retrieved. The insurance for the work was guaranteed by the present owner. The production partner of the company is a company from Germany, the Salecor
