system development. Thus, confirming the functions of the GRAS-associated polymorphisms will contribute to improving potato quality.

Conclusions {#Sec18}

===== This study confirmed a genetic basis for IDD in potato via GWAS and developed a rapid DNA-based diagnostic method for the detection of the IDD-causing genotype. We showed that the glutathione is associated with IDD in potato and that the active components of glutathione, such as glutathione and phytochelatins, promote tuberization and inhibit tuber starch biosynthesis. The GRAS-associated SNPs in StDEL1 function as drivers of the development of IDD. These studies provide a molecular basis for improving the quality of potatoes and increasing their economic values. Additional files {#Sec19}
